INTRODUCTION

Welcome to Anderson Ranch! We are excited to welcome you to your workshop experience. This handbook along with the visitor information on our website will help you get the most out of your visit. Workshops help you see yourself and your work from a new perspective. Your growth may be as straightforward as learning a new technique or as expansive as provoking a new life's path. It is likely that your workshop will unfold differently than you imagined; embrace the experience. If you have taken workshops in the past, remember that no two are alike, but all are sure to inspire you beyond your wildest expectations. Inspiration has always been a part of the mission of the Ranch, and that has not changed. Workshops generally meet from 9AM to 5PM, Monday through Friday, with an hour break for lunch, unless stated otherwise in the course description.

Workshops are intensive experiences, and participants may find themselves in the studios in the evenings. You can expect Anderson Ranch to operate with your health and safety as our number one priority. Due to safety concerns, students may have limited access to certain equipment during evening and non-class hours. Additional studio hours will take place from 7-9PM, Monday-Thursday.

By registering for a workshop, you have committed to attending all scheduled sessions. Arriving late, departing early, or missing class in the middle of the day is disruptive. Please come prepared to participate in a positive and constructive manner, and be ready to engage with the instructor, the course material and the other students.

The student handbook provides information about how to get to the Ranch and other important logistical details. In addition to this handbook, please carefully read our visitor information on the website, your course description and supply list. Familiarity with these will ensure that when you arrive at Anderson Ranch, you can immerse yourself in your workshop without delay. If you have any questions regarding course content, faculty, or skill level, please do not hesitate to contact us.
